AN EPISODE RECALLED.
Francis E. Bliss, the victim of the only tar-and-feather episode to come before the Washington courts, appeared as the defendant in the Criminal Court of the District of Columbia yesterday charged by the Bliss-Albrecht Company of Baltimore, with the embezzlement of the sum of $668.90. Bliss was at one time a member of the firm which makes the charge against him.

Francis E. Bliss, Jr., first stepped into the limelight July 29, 1908, when he was given a coat of tar and feathers.
The men accused of having laid the coat of tar on Bliss were Charles Martinson, James L. White and Henry C. Cole. It was alleged that Bliss had been in the habit of visiting the Martinson home, and had occupied an apartment there temporarily.

On the night of the assault Bliss alleges that he was called up on the telephone by a woman, who told him to come to the basement door of the Martinson house immediately. He drove to the house in a carriage, and says he was let in by the basement door, where Mr. Martinson, White and Cole awaited him. The pot of tar stood ready before the visitor realized what was happening.
He said he had been treated to a thick, black coat of the substance. He later admitted that White's part in the performance was only that of an onlooker.

Martinson gave as the reason for the treatment with tar the attention he alleged Bliss had paid Mrs. Martinson.
He talked of a "strange influence" that Bliss had gained over his wife, and mentioned hypnotism as a means of this "influence."

In the course of a little less than three months, when the tar and feather episode had died down, Bliss again attracted attention by appearing in police court and relating a story of knock-drops and robbery that he said happened to him the night before.
